NELL NELSON. ROSINA VOKES.

The admirable Vokes always comes to us just in the nick of time, when we are begin-ning to fret a little and to fume a bit, when melodrams has already exhausted us and my side and I look up the meaning of farce-comedy ceased to be amusing. Rosina is the step between the theatrical season and the Summer vacation, with a slight leaning in the direction of the vacation. We have already grown to long for her advent, which is announced with the Spring. Rosina and the crocuses greet us together.

Miss Vokes never produces one solid threeact play, but three delightful little one-act compositions. You are not obliged to be at Daly's at an early hour. This week if you knotting his small brow austerely, "there go at 9 o'clock you will encounter "Wig and Gown," a comedietta by F. W. my teachers have told me to listen to it and let it carry me off for mental development. If there is any fine feeling or sensitive emotion in me music will surely have an effect. It will refine me, and that's what I want.

Miss Vokes's attempt to smoke a cigar caused roars of laughter, and so did her caused roars of laughter, and so did her some. Bosina's voice is a farce to itself, and she is clever enough to know that it is a burlesque and to use it as such. The entertainment concluded with "A Double Lessen" which is not now to this core in the purpose. son," which is not new to this city, but it "Yes, I go to the theatre a great deal.

CHANCE FOR THE POETS.

The Evening World " Offers a Prize for the Best Twelve-Line Poem. A great many poems are found daily in the EVENING WORLD'S mails. But for some reason or other they do not get into type. The poets are accordingly grisved and the public deprived of some very interesting reading. Is it fair that the efforts of these budding poets should be crushed ?

It is not, and the Evening World here-with opens a poetry contest free to all, and will present the winner with a double gold eagle. There are many poets, and the Spring season is as conducive to poetry as it is to new apparel. So out of consideration for the public and the poets no poem may be longer than twelve lines. Any meter will do and ordinary poetic license will be allowed. Poems of love, humor, pathos of anything else will be in orden Here are the conditions: Poem must not exceed toethe lines, Must be written on one side of paper onthe Writer's Juli name and address must be sent for good faith, if not for publication. Contestants must address communications to Poetry Editor, Box 2,354, here York ____
